QUESTION: (10 Marks)

Over the past few years, we've seen a consistent decline in the number of people who are using the internet to find information. This is a significant trend that we need to address.

The data shows that the number of people who use the internet to find information has decreased by 15% over the last three years. This is a concerning trend that we need to address.

There are several reasons for this decline. One major factor is the increasing cost of internet access, which has made it more difficult for many people to stay online.

Another reason is the growing reliance on mobile devices, which often have smaller screens and less powerful processors than desktop computers. This makes it more difficult to find and use information online.

Finally, there is a growing concern about the quality of information available online. Many people are becoming more skeptical of what they see on the internet, and this is leading to a decrease in their overall usage.

We need to take action to address these issues. One way to do this is by providing more affordable internet access options for people who are struggling to stay online.

Another way is by improving the quality of information available online. We need to ensure that the information we find is accurate and reliable.

Finally, we need to encourage people to use the internet more effectively. We can do this by providing more training and support for people who are new to the internet.

By taking these steps, we can help to reverse the decline in internet usage and ensure that everyone has access to the information they need.

We need to work together to address these issues and ensure that everyone has access to the information they need.

Let's work together to ensure that everyone has access to the information they need.
